ABSTRACT

The Library Career Training Program, Title II-B of the Higher Education Act (HEA), provides grants to institutions of higher education and library organizations or agencies to train persons in librarianship through fellowships, institutes, and traineeships and to establish, develop, and expand programs of library and information science. This booklet is a synthesis of materials contained in the applications for fellowships in fiscal year (FY) 1992. It has been prepared for use by librarians, counselors, and prospective students of library and information science seeking information about the projects funded under Title II-B of the HEA. The abstracts are listed alphabetically by state and include the following information: institution; project director; number and level of fellowships; FY 92 funding; grant period; grant number; priority selected; and project objective(s). Several tables present information on: HEA Title II-B fellowship/traineeship funding history, FYs 1966-92; total fellowships and traineeships by state, FYs 1966-92; HEA Title II-B institute/traineeship funding history, FYs 1968-79; HEA Title II-B institute/traineeship funding history, FYs 1987-90; Library Training Institute Program enrollment data, FYs 1968-90; total institutes and traineeships by state, FYs 1968-90; and Library Training Institute Program by type of librarianship, FYs 1968-79 and 1987-90. A map of states benefiting from HEA Title II-B since FY 1966 is also included. (JLB)

Foreword

The Library Career Training Program, Title II-B of the Higher Education Act (HEA), provides grants to institutions of higher education and library organizations or agencies to train persons in librarianship through fellowships, institutes, and traineeships, and to establish, develop, and expand programs of library and information science.

Fiscal Year (FY) 1992 was an important year for the program. Congress increased the appropriation more than eight fold to a total of $5 million. As a result, in FY 92 the program supported 73 grants to 38 institutions of higher education to provide fellowships for advanced degrees in library and information science.

Since FY 66, the U.S. Department of Education has held annual competitions for fellowships under this program. To date, awards have totaled $38 million to support 16 bachelor's, 53 associate's, 3,152 master's, 265 post-master's, and 1,239 doctoral fellowships, and 77 traineeships. The cumulative totals, by state and institution, are shown in table 1.

This program has also sponsored competitions to fund institutes for training and retraining librarians. However, there was no such competition in FY 92. Please see tables 3-7 for summaries of the Library Training Institute Program.

Since FY 66, the fellowship and institute components of HEA Title II-B have provided funds totaling $57.1 million to assist more than 21,500 persons in training and retraining for library service. Institutions receiving grants do not require fellows or institute participants to pay tuition and fees. Stipends for fellowship recipients (for the academic year and summer) range from $5,400 for master's to $7,400 each for post-master's and doctoral. For fellowships, the institution receives an amount equal to the stipend to cover the cost of training and the cost of waiving tuition and fees. For institutes, costs vary according to duration, number of participants, and administrative costs, including personnel and support services.

This booklet is a synthesis of materials contained in the successful applications for fellowships in FY 92. It has been prepared for use by librarians, counselors, and prospective students of library and information science seeking information about the projects funded under Title II-B of the Higher Education Act.

Individuals interested in receiving a fellowship should apply directly to the grantee institution, which has the sole responsibility for selecting recipients, as indicated in Section 776.3 of the program regulations.

On behalf of the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Educational Research and Improvement, we wish to thank the applicants for submitting well-written and carefully planned project applications and the peer reviewers for their time and effort in reviewing and evaluating these applications.

Thanks are also extended to members of my staff whose efforts have made this publication possible.

NOTE: FY 92 is the last year this program was called the Library Career Training Program. Public Law 102-325, The Higher Education Amendments of 1992, retitled HEA Title II-B as the Library Education and Human Resource Development Program.

Introduction

The Library Career Training Program Final Regulations, published in the Federal Register on May 26, 1988, established six priorities:

- (1) To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging;
- (2) To train or retrain library personnel in new techniques of information acquisition, transfer, and communication technology;
- (3) To increase excellence in library leadership through advanced training in library management;
- (4) To increase excellence in library education by encouraging study in librarianship and related fields at the doctoral level;
- (5) To provide advanced training in the development, structure, and management of new library organizational formats, such as networks, consortia, and information utilities; and
- (6) To train or retrain library personnel to serve the information needs of the elderly, the illiterate, the disadvantaged, or residents of rural America.

Section 75.105(c)(3) of the Education Department General Administrative Regulations allows the Secretary to give absolute preference to applications that meet a priority for a program. The Secretary establishes an absolute preference by reserving all or part of a program's funds solely for applications that meet the priority.

The Notice Inviting Applications, published by the Secretary of Education in the June 12, 1991 Federal Register, cited priorities 1 and 4 as absolute priorities for which applications for fellowships were being invited. Eighty-two applications for fellowships yielded 73 grants. In addition, there were ten applications for institutes for which no funds were set aside.

The 73 grants made in FY 92 supported one or both of the priorities as follows:

Absolute Priority 1 (Priority 1 above):

- 20 applications for training/retraining school library media specialists
- 26 applications for training/retraining persons for children and young adult services
- 15 applications for training librarians for science reference

18 applications for training/retraining catalogers (including technologists)

Absolute Priority 2 (Priority 4 above):

19 applications for increasing excellence in library education by encouraging study in librarianship and related fields at the doctoral level with 6 adding emphasis on library planning, evaluation, and research.

The FY 92 appropriation for HEA Title II-B (Library Career Training Program and Library Research and Demonstration Program) was $5,325,000, with approximately $5,000,000 available for training activities. The 82 fellowship applications requested 903 fellowships totaling $7,701,492.

A group of 33 dedicated peer reviewers volunteered their time and effort to review and evaluate the 82 applications. Each application was reviewed by three persons, and the three scores were then averaged and ranked from highest to lowest.

FY 92 awards totaling $5 million were made to 38 institutions of higher education to support 416 fellowships for advanced degrees in library science as follows: 300 master's fellowships were funded for $3,282,000; 12 post-master's fellowships for $177,600; and 104 doctoral fellowships for $1,540,200.

Abstracts for each funded project, arranged alphabetically by state, are presented in this booklet.

FY 92 Funding	$108,000
Grant Period	6-1-92 to 8-31-93
Grant Number	R036B20093

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

Participants selected from the pool of strong teaching faculty in elementary and secondary schools are expected:

- To develop an awareness of the place of the school library media program in the curricular context of an individual school and school system;
- To plan programs, using instructional design procedures, and to select appropriate instructional materials to meet learner objectives; and
- To become proficient in using information technologies to access information from a variety of sources.

Grant Number	R036B20076

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

This project concentrates on identifying students with a scientific or technical background in the region's colleges and universities (with particular emphasis on targeting historically black institutions). In addition to regular requirements for graduate programs, requirements include previous training in a scientific or technical discipline and an interest in information technology demonstrated through previous work experience.

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

This project is designed to meet the needs for retraining school library media specialists, preferably African Americans, who are acquiring "new" Arkansas certification as a School Library Media Specialist, an earned Master of Science in Library, Media, and Information Technologies, and a specialization in applications of computers to school library media center operation and management.

Grant Period	8-1-92 to 10-31-93
Grant Number	R036B20011

Priority Selected

To increase excellence in library education by encouraging study in librarianship and selected fields at the doctoral level with particular emphasis on planning, evaluation, and research.

Project Objective(s)

The intent of this project is to prepare qualified researchers capable of making strong contributions to Library and Information Science Education (including areas of library planning, evaluation, and research). Fellowship recipients are students intending to specialize in library planning, evaluation, and research with first priority given to new applicants to the Ph.D. program.

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

To prepare public and school librarians specializing in services to children and young adults with multicultural backgrounds is the major purpose of this project. Fellowship recipients in the area of services to children and young adults are required to take courses such as "Work with Children and Young Adults in School and Public Libraries." Fellowship recipients in school media must complete the program of study for the California Library Media Teacher credential. Both groups must take a course on information needs in a multicultural society.

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

Participants are required to have either previous academic training in an appropriate field of study (e.g., education or the sciences) or considerable work experience that is related to the objectives (e.g., childcare, social work, laboratory assistant). Persons to be trained in cataloging must know a foreign language and demonstrate knowledge in other appropriate fields. A practicum either in the youth services department of a public library or in a school media center is an option for independent study.

Project Objective(s)

The School of Library and Information Science, the School of Education, and the Institute for the Study of Developmental Disabilities are cooperating to provide options for students to receive an endorsement in early childhood special education at the post-master's level. This project is designed for concentrating study in one or more of the following areas:

- Literature and information services to youth with special needs, especially in early childhood.
- Instructional design and collection management in school library media programs.
- Information and outreach services to children and young adults through public libraries.
- Cooperative efforts in policy and programming between school and public library services designed for children and young adults.
- Management skills leading to coordination of the development of school district-wide networking and media services.

Project Objective(s)

The objectives of the program focus on developing school media librarians who can:

- provide effective intellectual and physical access to information-supporting educational programs and activities in the school;
- provide learning experiences that encourage users to become discriminating consumers and creators of information;
- provide leadership, instruction, and consulting assistance in the use of instructional and information technology; and
- promote full integration of library media programs into the curriculum.

Grant Number	R036B20041

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

Enhancing library services for people with physical disabilities is one of the benefits expected from this project. To achieve this, LSU is recruiting students with leadership potential and a demonstrated interest in providing services to people with disabilities in academic, school, and public libraries. LSU provides a program of studies which include courses in the psychology and sociology of physical disabilities, in addition to regular courses for the library and information science master's program of studies.

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

Recruiting and preparing students to provide competent library services to support science programs in schools or to improve the quality of science resources and services to children and young adults in public libraries should result in much improved science reference through the use of appropriate technology. Field experiences for each student are required.

Project Objective(s)

There is a growing need to identify and train traditionally underrepresented individuals who hold positions of service to children and young adults in urban areas. The program of study includes, in addition to regular course work, structured field service and a research component focusing on the development and implementation of information services to at-risk populations in the urban setting. It is expected that the recipients will, upon completion of their studies, plan and carry out services such as pre-literacy, literature-sharing, and teen parenting programs.

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

This project provides education at the master's level for professional librarians to assume leadership positions in either children and youth services or cataloging and management. As in the past, the main target groups for these fellowships are qualified disadvantaged students. Fellows concentrating on youth services are educated on the new whole language literacy approach, which emphasizes research on and implementation of programs that develop literary and critical reading abilities in youth while employing computer-driven technologies to reach that end. Fellows concentrating in cataloging work to combine new technologies that provide principles and guidelines for the design of third-generation Online Public Access Catalogs (OPACs). Fellows concentrating in management work with Dr. Betty J. Turock to apply qualitative and quantitative evaluation techniques to library performance that measure impact as well as input and output.

To increase excellence in library education by encouraging studies in librarianship and related fields at the doctoral level.

Project Objective(s)

Two overarching needs are addressed by this project: research in human information needs and preparing library educators to provide high quality education to future librarians. Students study for the Ph.D. in Communication, Information, and Library Studies with a concentration in human information behavior and library education. The focus on human information behavior paradigm (new to library and information research and practice) is expected to increase the responsiveness of information services to users as well as enabling users to increase their proficiency in transferring knowledge from one information-seeking situation to another.

To increase excellence in library education by encouraging studies in librarianship and related fields at the doctoral level.

Project Objective(s)

The fellowship program provides an opportunity for two experienced librarians to complete the first year of studies in an interdisciplinary program leading to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Information Science. The University is committed to providing continuing financial support for the second and third years of fellows' doctoral study.

The Information Science Doctoral Program at the University at Albany is cosponsored by six schools and academic departments of the university. This interdisciplinary program is designed for persons interested in advanced study and research in the nature of information as a phenomenon and in the character of the information transfer process, including the creation of new knowledge, the utilization of what is known, and the dissemination of knowledge in both conventional and electronic formats. The emphasis is on research, teaching, and the application of research findings to professional practice. Built on the model of the scientist-practitioner, it prepares graduates for both academic and research careers in library and information science or in a related discipline and for higher level information management and policy positions in private and public sector organizations.

Project Objective(s)

The purpose of this fellowship program is to educate students in the area of preservation administration. Specific objectives are:

- To recruit qualified students, particularly from minority groups, into a program of library/information science with a specialization in preservation administration, which includes management of large bodies of information in paper, microform, or electronic form;
- To provide a high-level interdisciplinary program designed to prepare students for dealing with policies regarding areas of potential conflict, such as resource allocation; and
- To develop a more research-oriented approach to problem solving in the preservation administration field.

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

The course of study for the master's in library science prepares students to adapt current theory into significant practice in libraries and other information agencies. To accomplish this, computer, information and media studies are merged with the traditional elements of librarianship. In addition, specialization by type of library (academic, public, school, and special—including health science, law and music libraries) is offered. A specialization in science reference resources and services is being added. Thus the students selected for this project follow a special track for preparing to become science reference librarians. A number of libraries, such as Buffalo Museum of Science Library, Bell Aerospace Library, Occidental Chemical Corporation Technical Information Center, are available for student special projects and practicum.

Number and Level	6 Master's
FY 92 Funding	$64,800
Grant Period	8-1-92 to 10-31-93
Grant Number	R036B20072

Priority Selected

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

The University of Oklahoma Cataloger Project offers both solid instruction in the principles and practices of librarianship and an opportunity to specialize in bibliographic control services. The required internship enables the fellows to apply their knowledge and skills in an exemplary cataloging department in a university, public, or special library or information center. The project provides opportunities to engage in directed research on relevant issues in descriptive cataloging, subject analysis, and online access.

Moreover, the Cataloger Project is designed to facilitate the fellows' participation in activities of professional associations and to foster their appreciation of the need for continuing professional education in the design, management, and evaluation of bibliographic control systems.

Priority Selected

To increase excellence in library education by encouraging study in librarianship and related fields at the doctoral level.

Project Objective(s)

Participants are encouraged to advance the theory and practice of the information profession through research and publication while pursuing one of three areas of study—management of information resources, scholarly and professional communication, and information systems design and evaluation. In both the teaching and research interests of the faculty and in the research conducted by the students in the doctoral program, particular emphasis is placed on library planning, evaluation, and research.

To train or retrain library personnel in areas of library specialization where there are currently shortages, such as school media, children's services, young adult services, science reference, and cataloging.

Project Objective(s)

- a) To increase opportunities for qualified racial and ethnic minorities to acquire the first professional degree in librarianship; and
- b) To increase the number of professionally-educated individuals in areas where there are shortages, which include:
 - Children's and young adult services in public and school library services;
 - Service to older citizens in libraries and information centers;
 - New techniques of information acquisition, transfer and communication technology, and planning, evaluation, and dissemination; and
 - Service in science reference/and or medical reference.

Project Objective(s)

Identifying and preparing experienced individuals from racial and ethnic minority groups and women for careers in research and teaching in areas of need, such as service to children and young adults in school media centers and public libraries, is the primary objective of this project.

Enabling persons currently employed in libraries and information agencies or teaching in library and information science education programs to complete a year of doctoral study and increasing the number of individuals at the doctoral level to prepare for careers in research and teaching in the areas of need, such as school media and children's and young adult services, are additional objectives.

Project Objective(s)

The broad objective is to prepare people for the professorate to be successful in all three areas of performance expected of professors—research, teaching, and institutional service. The specific objectives are:

- To recruit and support doctoral students whose goal is to be a professor of library and information science;
- To acculturate students to the values and norms of the American professorate;
- To introduce students to the art of teaching, using the master apprentice approach; and
- To teach students to be proficient researchers.

To increase excellence in library education by encouraging studies in librarianship and related fields at the doctoral level, with particular emphasis on library planning, evaluation, and research.

Project Objective(s)

The program specialization represents a concentrated, organized effort to prepare researchers, educators, managers, and consultants with expertise in computer-based information systems for positions in schools of library and information studies, libraries, networks and consortia, and other non-profit and for-profit information-related organizations.

These organizations will increasingly have difficulty in identifying and recruiting faculty, staff, and consultants who are sufficiently prepared to teach, perform research, and otherwise work in the area of computer-based information systems.

The background that students bring to this specialization program, the program's course of study, and its emphasis on participation in the field during doctoral studies should adequately prepare men and women to fill these positions.
